Gerunds for likes and dislikes

Introduction

They enjoy cycling.

Definition

A gerund is a noun formed from a verb with 'ing' - it is the name of an activity or a state. For example, 'going'.

We use some verbs and expressions with gerunds to talk about likes and dislikes.

Construction

Affirmative: 1. Subject + verb + gerund I like cooking.

2. Subject + 'be' + expression + gerund I'm keen on cooking.

Negative: 1. Subject + 'do' + 'not' + verb + gerund I don't like cooking.

2. Subject + 'be' + 'not' + expression + gerund I'm not keen on cooking.

Interrogative: 1. 'Do' + subject + verb + gerund Do you like cooking?

2. 'be' + subject + expression + gerund Are you keen on cooking?

Uses

Here are some examples: <?xml:namespace prefix = "o" ns = "urn:schemas-microsoftcom:office:office"/>

To talk about what we like doing	To talk about what we don't like doing
like enjoy prefer love* adore* to be keen on to be fond of to be crazy about* [mainly US]	don't like dislike don't enjoy hate* can't stand* [informal] not keen on [more common in negative]

^{*} These expressions are stronger.

'Don't like' or 'dislike'?

These verbs have the same meaning but 'don't like' is more common. We can use 'dislike' as a noun, usually in the plural form:

Tell me about your likes and dislikes. I like talking to customers but I don't like writing reports.

Prefer

'Prefer' with a gerund is similar to 'like' and 'enjoy' but there is a comparison with other activities:

Do you prefer reading or watching TV?

Do you like working from home? Yes, I do but I prefer being at the office. 2025/12/18 17:12 3/4 Gerunds for likes and dislikes
