Emphatic 'do'

I do liko that one

Definition

We sometimes use 'do' as an auxiliary verb before the bare infinitive of a main verb in order to emphasise a feeling or expression.<?xml:namespace prefix = "o" ns = "urn:schemas-microsoft-com:office:office" />

Construction

We can use this structure in the present simple with 'do' or 'does':

```
Subject + 'do'/'does' + bare infinitive:
He does make a good bouillabaisse.
```

Or in the past simple with 'did':

```
Subject + 'did' + bare infinitive:
They did have a good time at the party.
```

And in the imperative with 'do'.

```
'do' + bare infinitive:`
Do take a seat.
```

Notes

- We can use emphatic 'do' to express certainty even when it is a lie: I really did do my homework but the dog ate it.
- 2. We sometimes use contrast to point out the positive aspect of a negative outcome:

We lost the match but we did have a really good game.

3. Emphatic 'do' can be used to emphasise that parts of a fictional work are factual:

Example: From 'Ratcatcher' by James McGee

A fictional book that is based on historical events at the end of the 18th and beginning of the 19 century surrounding the development of torpedoes following Bonaparte's coup d'état. Much of the book is about a fictional Bow Street runner. In the 'Historical Note' there are some quotes emphasising the parts of this book that are fact:

Many of the individuals in the story did exist.

- ...Captain Johnstone was also a real character and did work with Fulton.

- ...a rumour did begin to circulate that Bonapartists had contacted Captain Johnstone...
- However, several of the minor events depicted in the novel did happen. British riflemen did shoot the Spanish general...

Extracts from 'Ratcatcher' by James McGee used with kind permission of Harper Collins and Pegasus Books.

Examples

I do think hope the party goes well!

Do come this way please.

We do think it is important for children to learn how to swim.

Do be quiet - I'm trying to watch this programme.

I really did see a mouse come and eat one, honest.
